TIPS & TECHNIQUES

WHITE OR YELLOW?

Yellow glue is specially formulated for wood while white glue is a general-purpose adhesive. Yellow glue sets up twice as fast, and resembles most woods more closely when dried. Use white glue if you need more setup time, for instance, when you're gluing large surfaces or complex joints.

CHECK YOUR STAT!

If you feel that a room is actually hotter than the thermostat is set for, unscrew the thermostat and check the hole in the wall where the wires run through. Often, this hole is big enough to allow cold air from the inside of the wall to get into the thermostat so it doesn't sense the true room temperature. To block the air flow, fill the hole with a dab of putty or caulking compound.

POURING AWAY

Here's a way to avoid making a mess when pouring finish, thinner, or any other liquid from an oblong container: just make sure you hold the can so that the opening is on top. The liquid will leave the can in a steady stream.
